SIDNEY DELL WRITES

He Has Located at San Pedro, California for Good.

The Astorian is in receipt of a letter from Sidney Dell, the well known former citizen of this place, who says among other things, that he has located there permanently, and already calls it "the great seaport of the Pacific Southwest"; that he still retains his enthusiastic faith in Astoria's ultimate future, but has decided to transfer all his interests to Southern California, which is a paradise for health and immediate and bounding growth; he adds that he has just received a deed backed by a certificate of title, for five acres of land abutting upon the West Basin of the Inner harbor of San Pedro, and worth, at least, $2000 per acre, and has other "easy" matters in contemplation; that "Climate and Huntington" are the two great factors in the permanent boom of the San Gabriel Valley where he now resides. There are many here who will hear of his happy location. with pleasure, and abundant wishes for its illimitable continuance.
